

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A time and location keeper for employees includes a device which includes a power supply, a smart GPS receiver, and a data transmitter such as a cell phone. The components are worn on the person, for example in a compartmented belt. Time and location data are sent to a base station from the transmitter, which may be activated automatically on a schedule, or by a query signal from the base station.